

Abstract

The evolution of plant roots shaped the terrestrial landscape and underpinned the radiation of land plants. The aim of the talk is to provide an overview of the early evolution of plant roots, with special attention given to fossil plants preserved in the famous Rhynie chert and the rooting systems that anchored the giant Carboniferous tree clubmosses.'